STOOD THE TEST.

George Schweinfurth, Who Claims to be the Savior, Avoids a Trap of His Enemies.

A Prepossessing Woman, Hired for the Purpose, Fails in an Effort to Lead Him Astray.

The Temptress Discovers Nothing Unusual and is Herself Led to Believe in the Man.

Rockford, Ill., special: "Rev." George Jacob Schweinfurth, who claims to be the returned Savior, was recently subjected to a severe test, the object being to prove him & free lover and undeceive the many female and other believers who persist in accepting his declarations of divinity. The facts of the case were obtained by the Herald correspondent this evening. About a year ago Dr. J. S. Wilkins, head of a medical dispensary on Dearborn street, Chicago, was living in Kansas City when Schweinfurth was holding services there. The doctor's wife became in a measure converted to the belief that Schweinfurth was Christ, and, it is said, came to Rockford with him. and, it is said, came to Rockford with him-Her husband took her abroad and spent a year to cure her of her mania. On her re-turn Schweinfurth again tried to induce the lady to follow him, and Wilkims kicked him out of the house in spite of the preach-er's warning that he must not touch God's holy one or he would be palsied. His wife has never been in good mental condition stage.

Meantime, Rev. S. L. Conde, of West-minster church, Rockford, became inter-ested in the doings of Schweinfurth, as were also several members of the Western Avenue Baptist church, Chicago. It is understood that these parties decided upon a plan by which they hoped to expose Schweinfurth and end his career as a schweinfurth and end his career as a preacher. They were more eager to attain this end when, as alleged, Dr. Wilkins obtain proof that the pretended Savior had a half million of property in his own name, all of which had been contributed by deluded believers. Several at-tempts had already been made to expose Schweinfurth, but all had been unsuccess-ful and hence great secrecy was observed by those engaged in the plan. Some of Schweinfurth's apostles had been prosely-tizing among the members of the Western Avenue Baptist church, Chicago, and Dr. Mandeville, the pastor, all the more readily gave his aid and countenance to the enter-

About two weeks ago a woman of pre-possessing appearance alighted from an lilinois Central train here. She was a brunette, of medium height and womanly mold. At the depot she was met by one of a female detective, hired, it is said, by the two clergymen and Dr. Wilkins to aid in two clergymen and Dr. Wilkins to aid in the exposure which they hoped would result from her visit. Mrs. Claffin had undertaken to demonstrate that Schweinfurth was not a saint, as claimed by him and the many female converts who lived at "heaven." His knowledge of her intended visit she explained to herself on the ground that some one in Chicago had leaked, and that the information had reached some of the imposter's followers. Her plan was to come to Rockford, become acquainted with some Beckmanites living in the city, and then, by expressing a desire to investigate their religion, be invited to accompany them to the headquarters. After she had been there for several days she began to paying especial attention to Schweinfurth and in the common that while she had been there for several days she began to paying especial attention to Schweinfurth and in there for several days she began to paying especial attention to Schweinfurth and in especial attention to Schweinturur and in various ways sought to have him know that she was enamored of him. Evidently he failed to comprehend what she meant, or else he was proof against temptation. She professed to believe implicitly in him. One day when they happened to be alone she told him of the joy she had felt since meeting him. Then, in the most melting ones at her command, she whispered to him of her love and trust. Schweinfurth gazed at her in astonishment for a second or two as she sat gazing into his face, and then pushed her away, saying, by unmis-table action, "Get thee behind me, Satan." Mrs. Clafin was utterly routed, but con-soled herself with the idea that the preacher had been forestmed with the and the Schweinfurth failed to observe anything that had the slightest appearance of wrong, and was actually beginning to believe there was something extraordinary about the man when she left Rockford. Since her depar-ture some of the Beckmanites claim that one day when Mrs, Claffin complained of headache Schweinfurth cured it instantly ing: "According to thy faith shall thy strength be. Be thou healed." They also declare that other women in the place had frequently been cured of slight ailments in like manner.

It is understood that Dr. Wilkins contemplates bringing suit against Schwein furth for $25,000 damages on account of in-jury to Mrs. Wilkins' mental condition, and that he hopes to prove the man an imposter by Mrs. Ciatim's evidence by laying his hands on her head and say-

Of course it might be that the Ger-mans would have the air ships first, and the mans would have the air ships first, and the war would be brought to a conclusion by the unconditional sure ader of all the principal cities in the United States, under the persuasion of a dynamite shell held suspended over each; but it would be so easy to turn the tables at a moment's notice that, after a few towns had been mutually blown up, the quarrel would be terminated by common consent. nmon consent.

In regard to passengers, the air ships, if they proved practicable at all, would offer such immense advantages in point of safety, speed and comfort that they would soon supersede all other conveyances for traveling long distances. It seems to us that the proposed speed of 100 miles an hour would in practice be greatly exceeded. There would be no such obstacles to fast sailing in the air as are met with in ocean sailing in the air as are met with in ocean traveling, in the shape of waves, fogs and danger of collision. By keeping ships on danger of collision. By keeping sinps on the outward passage in the lower strata of the atmosphere and the inward bound ones in the upper strata, serious collisions would be out of the question; and, provided the speed could be made to exceed that of the air currents as much as that of steamships exceeds that of the occan currents, it is difexceeds that of the ocean currents, it is difficult to see what danger would remain of which travelers by well-built and well-managed air ships need be afraid.

Gloves That a Woman Treasurers. Washington Star: Not a few of the visitors, especially those of the feminine persnasion, have a positive feeling of veneration for the president, and some of them do very odd things while under the influence of his presence. The medal, up to date, is held by a very stylish little lady, a resident of New York city. She was at the White House on Saurday, waiting with the rest of the crowd for the president to come moid. At the depot she was met by one of the Beckmaoites, and was soon on her way to the home of Schweinfurth. When she reached "heaven," as the place is called by many of Schweinfurth's followers, she was met by the preacher. He showed her a telegram addressed to herself from him. He claimed that by divine power he was enabled to tell that she was planning to visit them, and that he had written out the telegram inviting her to come but that through some oversight it was not sent. He also claimed that by the same power he knew that she was coming that day, and that he accordingly had sent the hack to meet her. He expressed great pleasure over her arrival and hoped that she would not find that her trip had been in vain. Schweinfurth was unaware that the good-looking brunette was Mrs. Claffin, for the world for the president, waiting with the rest of the crowd for the president to come down stairs to the tri-weekly reception, whed an idea struck her, hit her hard. She rushed up to an usher and inquired of him as to the whereabouts of the nearest glove store. The information was given and on she dashed, returning in fifteen minutes with a new pair of the most expensive kind of gloves on her very pretty hands. Scrupulously avoiding contact with any of the crowd she at last reached the president, and when he grasped her slim little fingers she brought her left hand into service and completely enclosed the president's palm. She got a little more shake than most of the others did. Then she took off her gloves and wrapped them up carefully in paper. She told Capt. Densmore that she would keep them under day, and that he accordingly had sent the hack to meet her. He expressed great pleasure over her arrival and hoped that she would not find that her trip had been in vain. Schweinfurth was unaware that the good-looking brunette was Mrs. Claflin, a female detective, hired, it is said, by the a glass case, and that while she lived no other hands than her own would be privi-leged to touch them.

The Clear-Headedness of Youth. While the merits of the various blood purifiers are being shown up to the best advantage possible by their several manufacturers, we would suggest to persons eeling the need of such a medicine, that they try a dose of St. Patrick's Pills, and assure them that they will not only be sur-prised, but delighted with the result. They put a rope around his neck and hung him to a beam in the barn. Their wives entered the barn and the horrible spectacle caused one of them to faint. While the men were carrying her to the house the other woman cut down the hanging man, who was nearly dead. She resuscitated him, however, and he made his escape and has not been seen since.

Ben Wade and the Drum-Major, Writing to the New York Herald about the centennial parade in New York, Gen. Sherman tells the following: "I laughed to myself at the moment when the New York Seventh regiment approached with elan, for I thought of an old friend, the late elan, for I thought of an old friend, the late Senator Ben Wade, of Ohio, when he witnessed the arrival of the Seventh at Washington in the early days of the war. The capital was in danger. The confederates could have marched in at any time. The anxiety of the friends of the government was great. When the gorgeously uniformed drum-major approached, whirling his baton, the embodiment of the conventional pomposity of the office, handed down from drum-major to drum-major during the last 300 years. Senoffice, handed down from drum-major to drum-major during the last 300 years, Sen-ator Wade's non-military eye was attract-ed by the spectacle. He received a tre-mendous impression. The dashing volun-teers behind were lost sight of. The drum-major alone engrossed his attention. Turn-ing to his companion, Senator Wade ex-clained in awe-struck tones: 'The city is safe, after all.'"
